So dear to memory,
Thy name I love.

Thy wide and classic halls,
And fancy oft recalls
Thy grounds and grove.

Let music swell the breeze,
And ring from all the trees
Sweet friendship's song!
As year by year departs,
As memory's tear drops starts,
Our glad and grateful hearts,
The sound prolong.

Our childhood's God, to thee,
Planter of wisdom's tree,
To thee we sing.
Long may our school be bright,
With learning's holy light;
Protect her by thy might,
Great God, our King!

PROPOSED MEASURES OF LOCAL INTEREST

New County Jail Bill Would Meet Conditions in Rock County Very Nicely.

With the introduction of the new county jail bill, which meets the objections raised by the Governor in the vetoing of a similar measure, the local conditions which exist in Rock County are met with in a most commendable manner. Senator Henry Huber of Dane county, author of the former bill has presented his substitute measure which will now run the gamut of the two houses.

The original bill introduced by the governor on the ground that many of its provisions were too stringent. The new bill provides that any county having no workhouse, shall furnish labor to its prisoners. The same earned shall be turned over to those dependent upon them. Any person committed shall be required to perform any hard labor for not to exceed ten hours each day, except in the case of farm labor, not less than twelve hours in the county.

Any person who refuses to work diligently may be punished by being placed in solitary confinement not to exceed ten days for each refusal to so work, and shall be furnished only bread and water as food. Any person who shall escape, or attempt to escape shall be deemed guilty of a crime and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment in the state prison or county jail not more than one year.

The use of liquor is absolutely prohibited to these prisoners and any person who shall furnish liquor to them shall be punished by commitment to the county jail for not less than thirty days nor more than six months. It is made the duty of the sheriff to make contracts in writing for the employment of all convicted persons, where not employed in doing work for the county and to make rules and regulations for the collection of their earnings.

Before a person is sentenced under the terms of this bill it is made the duty of the court to determine what persons are dependent for support upon the person convicted.

Jim Thorpe, according to the latest word, is coming along nicely with the Giants and shows promise of developing into the real thing as a ballplayer. When McGraw signed the Indian last winter, he didn't expect that Jim should have all the rest of 'em tied to the third rail exactly, but he felt pretty sure that Thorpe would prove a good drawing card if nothing else. He is coming ahead wonderfully now and they say that it's because he's such a keen server. He watches the methods of his teammates and then tries the same thing himself. Thorpe is rooming with "Chief" Meyers and is constantly in his company and the older red-skin's advice and remarks can't help but do Jim a lot of good.

TO HOLD AUTO RACES
JUNE TWENTY-FIFTH

Date is Fixed for Events at the Park Association Track For Automobiles.

The definite date for the automobile race meet to be held at the Park Association track was set this morning for Wednesday, June 26th.

The contract for the track which was closed last Monday, calls for a one day meet with at least three drivers who took part in the international 500 mile sweepstakes race at Indianapolis on Decoration Day and if the officials of the meet are able to fulfill their promises the meet should furnish some real speed.

Louis Disbrow, Joe Nikrent and Wild Bill Endicott are the three famous drivers whose entries have been promised and all are well known in the motor world.

Mr. Dorward who has the meet in charge stated this morning that the Park Association had the greatest mile track he had seen this season and for automobile racing it would measure up to anything in the country among the one mile courses.

The genuine entries will be announced as soon as they are received, such drivers being made possible due to the big race meet scheduled for the Libertyville track just outside of Chicago, early in July.

JENNING'S TIGERS BEATEN BY WORLD'S CHAMPIONS, 7 TO 4

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Boston, June 17.—In the morning contest the world's champions defeated the Detroit Tigers, seven to four. Boston put Mosely, a recruit against Jennings' sluggers, and he held the Detroiters well in hand throughout the contest. Zamloch started for Detroit but gave way to Houck in the fourth. His successor fared little better for the Tigers bunched their hits in the sixth and added two more runs to their total. Detroit made an eleventh hour attempt to win the game but the early lead proved a stumbling block to them.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

June 17, 1913.—An area of high barometer, from the northwest, has become established over the upper lake region and Mississippi valley, replacing the hot muggy atmosphere that has prevailed during the past few days in that region by cool northerly breezes. An area of low barometer in western Canada is attended by showers and thunderstorms in North Dakota, Montana, and the western Canadian Provinces. Light scattered showers have also fallen in the east and south.

NEW ORGANIZATION WILL PLAY PALMYRA

High School Nine Has Been Disbanded for the Season and Will Not Play Post-Season Game.

Considerable trouble has arisen over the fact that the local high school baseball nine was scheduled to play at Palmyra on Thursday. Palmyra made the mistake at first, and advertised that the local high school nine would battle against their high school team. Bills were passed throughout their home town to this effect, and as soon as the mistake was noticed, a change was made.

About a week ago, when school closed, the local high school nine disbanded, on account of school rules and regulations. The team had no intentions of playing under the high school name, according to Captain Harry Ryan. He immediately telephoned to Palmyra and had the matter reconsidered. The game will be played, with the locals at first, and on Thursday, with the local organization advertised as the Jamesville Cubs. Perhaps the cause for the mistake is a misunderstanding by noting that the local high school team played at Palmyra, and at that time, this game was arranged. The management of the local team are satisfied to know that the matter is entirely settled, because they have no intentions of breaking any high school rules.

Connell will be on the firing line for the locals. He is now in the best of form, and much is expected of him. With Wilson, the veteran backstop, catching him, it is certain that the locals can pull out with the largest end of the score. The lineup, as announced yesterday, is as follows: J. Stewart, 2b; Wilson, c; J. Ryan, ss; H. Ryan, 3b; Hemming, 1b; Kennedy, cf; L. Stewart, rf; Kahlow, lf; Connell, p.

You Be The Judge

Let me do your next Dental work, and you compare your easy state of nerves with the torture you formerly endured in Dental chairs.

I am willing to abide by your honest decision.

Unnecessary Expenditures

It is easy to avoid great unnecessary expenditures, but it is the aggregate of the many small amounts you spend foolishly that keeps you from success. The thrifty man squanders neither his substance nor his vitality.

HERDENDORF TRIAL GIVEN TO JURORS VERY LATE IN DAY

Defendant Tells Story Differing in Many Points From That of Complainant—Several Witnesses Heard.

Decision as to the guilt or innocence of Rennie Herdendorf of the charge that he robbed John Anderson of $15 and a watch on the night of Friday, June 6, will probably not be made until late today as it was well past the middle of the afternoon before all the witnesses had been examined and the attorneys for the state and defense had yet to make their pleas. The state did not conclude the presentation of its evidence until early in the afternoon and the defendant then took the stand.

Trill of the case of the State versus Rennie Herdendorf was begun in the Municipal Court at about 10:45 o'clock this morning. Four of the twelve veniremen drawn were struck by the attorneys and four additional veniremen were obtained during a fifteen minute recess. The jurors sworn were W. F. Cowles, William English, O. L. Richards, Frank Bick, Charles Jascoe, Leonard Brack, David Lawrence, Samuel Warner, H. Baldwin, W. H. Wall George Yahn, and Harry Garbutt.

District Attorney Stanley Dumwidge introduced the case to the jury, outlining what the state would endeavor to prove. Attorney Frank Fisher, counsel for the defendant, stated what facts he would attempt to establish, the principal being the incompetence and insufficiency of the state's case.

John Anderson, the complainant, was the first witness sworn, and his account of the hold-up of which he was the victim, was substantially the same as that given in the preliminary examination. He related meeting the defendant in a saloon, conversing with him and others present about work, and promising to give the latter a job assisting him in his work as a painter.

On inquiring if it had come he was told that it had, but that he was on the next train. The result was that he stayed in town all afternoon and evening. All this time he was in the company of Herdendorf, who had a few drinks with him. The only time he was alone was when he had his supper in a restaurant.

About 9 o'clock in the evening, according to the testimony of Anderson Herdendorf asked him to step with him into the alley to the rear of the Nolan grocery at South in the park. While he stood with his back to the defendant and was about to walk out, the latter grabbed him by the neck, threw him down on his back, and hit him several times. His assailant then produced a pocket, stealing $15 and his watch which was worn from the chain.

Anderson was unable to call for help because the robber kept one hand over his mouth. The only resistance he was able to offer was to bite the thumb on the hand that silenced him. As soon as the robber departed he started to feel his way out. His call for help was heard by Fred Palmer, who was in the alley. Anderson denied that he was intoxicated, had played cards, or fallen asleep in any saloon.

He said that when robbed he had three dollars and a two dollar bill and a one dollar bill in his pocket. When he came down town that afternoon he changed a $20 bill.

Patrolman Sam Brown followed Anderson to the stand. He said Anderson told him to go to the station with Officer Albright about 9:30 o'clock. His eyes were closed by swellings, his face bloody and his clothes bespattered with blood and quite muddy. He was not in an intoxicated condition, the defendant about 2:30 o'clock the morning of June 7. He found him in bed with his clothes on, the knees of his trousers were muddy, and the thumb and two knuckles on one hand were skinned. When asked how he hurt his hand, Herdendorf replied that it happened when he was working at Rostein's junk yard.

Sheriff Whipple testified to examining the hands of the defendant two or three days after the alleged holdup at the request of Patrolman Champion. The thumb on the right hand was cabbled on the joint, and there were blood blisters on the under side of the thumb appearing to be such as might be produced by a bite.

Fred Albright, the officer who brought Anderson to the station was the last witness to be examined before the non recess. He said that he found the complainant on the south side of the Nolan grocery about two feet from the intersection of the Dodge and River streets. He asked him where his hat was and what happened to him. When told that he had been robbed he struck a match in the alley to find Anderson. The alley was very dark at this point, receiving no light from the street or any other source. Anderson showed no sign of intoxication but was so tired that he could not see for some time.

The testimony of Cursey R. Abraham was corroborative of that given by Patrolman Albright. On coming from a dance in the rink about 9:30 p. m. at June 6 he saw a man standing near the back door of the Nolan grocery at which he is employed. Being curious as to the reason for his presence there, he approached him. The stranger then called to him for help and he in turn summoned Officer Albright.

Charles Thompson was sworn as a witness and testified to seeing Anderson and Herdendorf together early in the same evening, and also to seeing Anderson when he was brought to the police station.

Herdendorf, when called to the stand, told a detailed story of his movements on June 6 and the two or three days preceding. He claimed that the mud on his clothes resulted from a fall down a bank as he was going home on the evening after he left Mr. Anderson's place. The mud on his hand was received from handling junk and from a fall that he suffered in his own home where he bumped his hand against a door. He parted from Anderson at the door of the Dermody saloon about 8:45 o'clock.

Harry Johnson, a young colored man, told of meeting both Anderson and Herdendorf in this saloon and setting out for drinks for them.

Hearing Held This Afternoon on Senator Bossard's Measure Ordering Payment by State.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., June 17.—Senator Bossard's bill to appropriate $5,000 in payment of attorney's fees in the proceedings relating to the attempted removal of Insurance Commissioner Ekern will be given a hearing this afternoon before the joint committee on finance. It is understood that a number of the members of the committee have expressed themselves in favor of the claim, but that they believe the amount should be scaled. Mr. Ekern claims that the attorneys who represented the governor are to be paid out of the state funds and that there is no reason why his legal assistance should not be compensated by the state. The committee will also hear arguments on the Skogmo bill to appropriate $7,500 to send three delegates to the exposition to be held in Christiania, Norway, in 1914.

Senator A. E. Martin's bill to compel all meat markets in the city of Milwaukee to remain closed on Sunday has been noticed for hearing on Wednesday before the senate judiciary committee. The bill has already passed both houses and had been sent to the governor. A long protest and a request for a further hearing was received last week and the senate recalled the bill to give a hearing upon the question. The Rosa bill for the licensing of hotels, board and rooming houses will be given a final hearing before the senate state of affairs committee this afternoon.

The joint finance committee last night reported for passage a substitute amendment to the Klean bill relating to the income tax offset for banks. In effect, banks are allowed the offset, and the bill places them in practically the same position as they were before the income law was enacted.

The Cunningham bill for a hospital for crippled and deformed children was reported for indefinite postponement, the committee feeling that this project cannot well be undertaken now and meet the increased demands of the state board of control at the same time. A senate bill 4523, changing the printing law by reducing the issue of the Blue Book still further and granting each legislator an additional number of railroad maps, was reported for passage.

Several bills carrying appropriations for various objects were reported for indefinite postponement, having been incorporated in the general appropriation bills or the salary bill.

BILLS OF INTEREST TO TOWNSHIPS PASS

Provide That Liquor License Money May be Used for Sanitation Purposes.

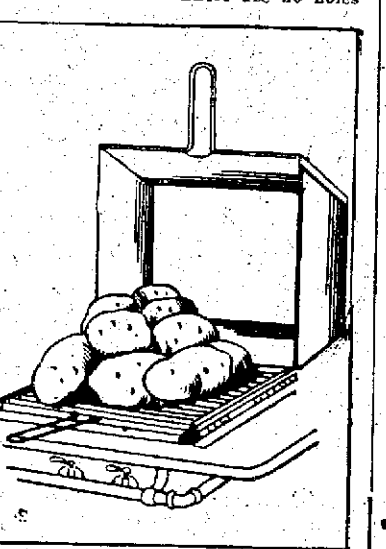

Madison, Wis., June 17.—Two bills of interest to towns have just been signed by the governor. One measure provides that a part of the liquor license money collected may, if ordered by the city council, village board or town board, be used for the prevention and the spread of diseases. The bill was introduced by Assemblyman S. C. Goff of Elkhorn, but has been changed so as to leave the operation of the law optional. Any day has been noticed for hearing on the bill. The measure provides that unless the town board at its annual meeting shall otherwise direct any person maintaining a watering place near the road shall be entitled to an offset of $5 annually on his highway taxes.

Prof. Commons' idea of maintaining free employment offices in towns where agricultural laborers are scarce has been made the subject of legislation in a bill that has just been signed by the governor. The measure provides that any county, city, town or village may enter into an agreement with the Wisconsin industrial commission to jointly maintain an employment office. In a recent statement Prof. Commons said that he believed such a plan would be advantageous in solving the question of lack of employees on farms. He claims that there are scores of places in every community where work can be offered and that a town employment bureau will put interested parties in touch with each other.

A HANDY OVEN

Sets on Top of Gas Stove and Heats Up Instantly.

For baking quantities so small that the heating of the regular oven is unnecessary waste of gas, an Illinois man has patented an ingenious separate oven. This device is about nine inches square and five inches high and consists of two hinged sections, a flat bottom and a dome top. The oven sets on almost instantaneously. A toaster and a flatiron plate come with it. There are no holes

WILL HEAT IRONS ALSO.

In the receptacle, so the heat cannot escape, but the dome can be lifted if ventilation is required to brown anything. It is said that flatirons heated in this apparatus keep quite clean, as they are removed from the flame and not affected by soot or fuming. The oven can easily be carried about by means of its double handles.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

THE WRONG KIND OF COMPLIMENTS.

THE OTHER afternoon I had a caller who said nice things about my house, my clothes, my flowers, my family, etc. almost every time she opened her pretty mouth.

Such clever and graceful nice things, too!

She assured me that my old-fashioned furniture was beautiful in itself, but even more beautiful as a background for my personality.

She flattered my taste in clothes by asking if I would mind if she copied a certain point in a gown which I wore. The full force of this compliment is only understood when you are told that she dresses infinitely better than I do and knows it, and knows that I know it.

She declared that I must be prepared to have her intrude frequently because she did so enjoy drinking afternoon tea from my old blue cups; it added so much to the flavor of the tea, "which is exquisite enough in itself, my dear."

You would surely think I would have been in a glow of pleasure over all these compliments, wouldn't you? And yet, hear my confession,—"they meant little or nothing to me."

And now, before you condemn my lack of appreciation, let me explain.

I did not feel delighted with her gracious speeches because I knew they were actuated, not by genuine enthusiasm nor yet by a desire to please me, but merely by the wish to say clever and pretty things, that she herself might shine thereby in the eyes of my other guests and myself.

How did I know it?

I felt it just as one usually feels insincerity and pretense.

You think I may be doing her an injustice? Possibly. But I doubt it very much.

I think she is a type of a large class; the people who say gracious things and do kind acts not from any desire to give happiness but simply to make themselves appear well.

Surely you have met such people. Surely you have known by the self-satisfied smile with which they launched their pretty compliments that it was of themselves and not of you they were thinking. Surely you have realized the shallowness of their benevolence and seen it evaporate beneath some slight inconvenience or annoyance or an insufficient return in gratitude.

Such people sometimes wonder why they are not more popular. They do the world an injustice. They think it unable to sense insincerity and tell a pose from a genuine feeling.

A pretty speech made with a genuine emotion behind it, and made only for the pleasure it will give and not for the admiration it will excite, is a joy forever.

But, the other kind, and the people who make them, we could well do without.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS...

Things Worth Knowing.

Soak in a weak solution of chloride of lime for several hours to remove mildew.

To remove machine oil stains, rub the spot with lard. Let stand for several hours, then wash with cold water and soap.

Fish may be sealed a great deal more easily if they are first dipped in boiling water for an instant.

When washing children's frocks, always add one ounce of alum to the last rinsing water, as it helps to render them fireproof.

The Table.

Iced Coffee—Put a big lump of ice in a punch bowl and pour over it three pints of strong black coffee that has been sweetened to taste. Cover with whipped cream and chill with powdered ice. Serve in tall frosted glasses.

Gooseberries in Butter—Butter six small cups of equal size and fill with green gooseberries. Make a batter of four ounces of flour, one egg and half a pint of milk, and let this stand for an hour. Half an hour before time for serving, fill up each cup with a batter of gooseberries. Bake in a hot oven for twenty minutes. Turn out of the cups to serve. Garnish with a spoonful of stiffly whipped egg on each mold.

Lemon Ice—One quart of boiling water poured over the yellow rind of two lemons and allowed to stand till it is cold. This is strained, the juice of four lemons and one pint of sugar are added, and then the mixture is frozen.

Potato Cones—Instead of heaping the mashed potatoes in a dish, butter a small cup or deep tin and light pack in the potatoes until molded, then carefully turn out on a greased pan. Lightly dab with melted butter or beaten egg yolk and quickly brown in a hot oven, or turn out on a hot platter and sprinkle with finely chopped parsley mixed with chopped red beets.

Apple and Cherry Salad—Two cups of diced tart apples, one cupful of diced celery, one-half cupful of raisins, a dash of salt, one-fourth of a cupful of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, one tablespoonful of powdered sugar, celery tips or lettuce leaves. Stir the raisins in a little water. Mix together the oil, salt, lemon juice, sugar and a tablespoonful of the raisin juice, beating well. Marinate the apples, celery, raisins separately in it for thirty minutes, then mix together and serve garnished with the green.

Cream Puffs—One cup of hot water and half cup butter, boil water and butter together and stir in one cup flour while boiling. When cool, add two eggs (not beaten), mix and drop in pans, bake twenty-five minutes. Fillings: One cup of milk, half cup sugar, one egg, two tablespoonfuls flour and vanilla to taste.

Every Day Talks For Every Day People...

It would seem as if summer has arrived.

Are we prepared for it? Is every door and window properly screened so as to admit all the fresh air and whatever breeze may blow?

We can all make our summer endurable, enjoyable, if only we decide to.

As our kitchens are the factories of our housework, it is important that they be kept cool and airy, and that the rest of our home revolves around which the rest of our home revolves they should be well lighted, properly ventilated and sanitary as to their furnishings.

If we look upon our labor as a very important work, not drudgery, and bring intelligence and concentration to bear upon it we will have time every day to be out in the cool shady yard with the children.

Much of our work can be done out of doors. The hanging of the wash, the ironing on the shady porch and most of the mending.

The children can help us every forenoon with our work. If women realize the all-around help to be derived from early rising, the vexed problem of having to finish each day's work without having it lap into the next would be heard of very rarely.

Breakfast can rise at 4 or 4:30 and before breakfast finish ever so many of the day's necessary tasks. This will encourage, having a start on the day's work, and unconsciously you'll keep right on hustling so that by noon you will be practically through for the day, free to spend your afternoon out on the porch with the children, and your sewing.

Put your machine out on the porch and if possible have your porch screened.

This need not be an expensive bit of work. Measure it yourself, go to your local dealer, buy the screen by the yard or roll and have John put it on. He can do it.

He'll be willing and when he realizes the comfort of a porch thus treated he'll be glad you applied a few progressive ideas about it.

He may not say so in words, maybe your John is a reticent John. If he doesn't make the grave mistake of thinking that because he isn't orally gushing about the way you've rearranged the furniture or put a different collar and belt on little Sammie's last summer suit, that he doesn't realize and appreciate the fact that he's got a plucky, loyal hearted little partner as the keeper of his heart and of his home.

He demonstrates his appreciation daily by going out and toiling faithfully from early morning till the sun goes westward that you and the children may have a chance and a place to live.

He may not seek the shelter of the shady porch for a few moments respite while he beats the sun too oppressive to be longer borne.

He simply must keep busy, so, when he comes home at the close of a long, hot day don't tell him the

The New Plan Corn Cure. No Fuss, No Pain, Sure and Quick.

The Argyle Case

A Novelization by J. W. McConaughy of the Successful New Play by Harriet Ford, Harvey J. O'Higgins, and Detective William J. Burns, in Which Robert Hilliard Is Appearing.

Copyright, 1912, by Journal-American-Examiner.

Finley for an instant regarded him doubtfully, and then with a "very good, sir," went out into the hall. His coat had not disappeared before Kayton and his assistant had whipped books and cover off the table.

"Let's see if we've got anything here, Joe," said the chief. The young man produced a package of powder and dusted the top of the table with a dexterity and swiftness that spoke of long practice. Then the two men stooped and blew off the dust, and Kayton ran his eyes over the polished surface. The great detective shook his head doubtfully as he scanned the few fingerprints.

"This is a cold trail, Joe," he said. "I suppose these are Finley's. But"—he indicated two little rows of marks—"a woman has been holding on here with both her hands."

Manning bent over and examined them.

"That might have been the girl," he remarked.

"Yes," nodded Kayton, "and she was sitting down. Here are her eight finger prints. See if you can get her thumbs under the edge there." He moved on around, looking closely at every square inch. "She doesn't repeat," he said at last. "We'll have to take these all, Joe."

CHAPTER IV. The Adopted Daughter.

TO the uninitiated Manning's actions in following out this order would have been fraught with mystery. He pushed the table over to the window and tilted it on its side, adjusting and readjusting it until the light struck its polished surface at just the right angle. Then he produced a small but powerful camera, part of the contents of a small black hand satchel that he had dropped near the door and proceeded to take a number of photographs. He was aiming his chief with an infallible means of identification.

You probably know that while our finger tips, with their countless fine concentric circles and ovals and sweeping lines, all appear about the same, no two are identical. In the various police bureaus of the civilized nations there are now thousands of the imprints of the finger prints of convicted men, and thousands are added yearly. Yet of all that vast number no two are alike.

When made accidentally, on furniture or glass, for instance, these marks are practically invisible to the naked eye, but when the suspected object is treated to a bath of fine light dust they come out all a dull gray against the background and may be photographed and make an everlasting record.

While Manning was busily absorbed in this work his chief's mind was busily digesting and arranging what little he had learned thus far. But presently he was interrupted by the bustling entrance of Mrs. Wyatt.

"Mr. Kayton?" demanded the lady, pausing a little harder than usual, as she confronted the famous detective. "Is there anything you want to ask me?"

"Yes, I"—began Kayton, with a rush, but the voluble lady was not to be headed off.

"I wasn't here when it happened, you know," she bubbled. "I mean to say I don't know any more about it than you do, but I suppose you know a great deal." She beamed upon him.

"You don't look at all like a detective, Mr. Kayton. Do you know what I mean?"

Here she was more than six, but I really don't know much about it. I mean to say I wasn't there. It was in San Francisco, you know. Mr. Argyle and Mr. Mazuret were the dearest friends."

"What was Mr. Mazuret's full name?" Mrs. Wyatt bit her lips and rolled her eyes in the effort of recollection, holding her breath the while, with the result that her reply was a sort of explosion.

"I think it was John—yes, I know it was. It was John."

"What became of her mother?" inquired Kayton.

"Oh, she died there."

"In San Francisco?"

"Yes," nodded Mrs. Wyatt. "I really don't know much about her. Her maiden name was Marsh—Nellie Marsh. That's all I can tell you. I really don't know how I remember that. As I said, I never heard much about the mother except that there was some scandal about her."

Kayton concealed a keen and eager interest under an assumption of the mild curiosity of an idle gossip.

"Scandal?" he replied. "In what way?"

"I really can't say," replied Mrs. Wyatt. "Mr. Argyle never could be persuaded to talk about her. It was entirely on account of Mr. Mazuret that he became interested in Mary."

"Entirely?" murmured Kayton.

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Wyatt assured him. "Entirely."

"How long have you lived here?" he asked pleasantly.

"Oh, many, many years! I mean to say—it must be twenty—ever since my husband died. I'm a widow—do you know what I mean? I'm a very old friend of the family, and when Mr. Argyle adopted Mary he felt that he must have a woman in the house."

Kayton nodded and stroked his chin.

"Tell me, Mrs. Wyatt, what were the relations between Mr. Argyle and his son?"

Mrs. Wyatt drew a deep breath as ammunition for another speech. It was a long time since she had had so willing and delightful a listener.

"Oh, Mr. Kayton," she said pantingly, "that's something I don't like to talk about. It was the only thing we had to make us unhappy. Do you know what I mean? Bruce and his father never seemed to agree about anything. Why, the last time they quarreled he cut him off and left everything to Mary. We didn't any of us know it until yesterday. It's too bad to leave Bruce without anything. He's an artist, you know, and of course artists can't make much with their art. I mean to say if they don't have money they never get anywhere unless they're famous or something, and that doesn't happen very often. Do you know what I mean?"

Kayton nodded sympathetically, and Mrs. Wyatt, fortified by another breath that would carry her several hundred words, proceeded with her story:

"That night, Mary tells me, there had been a reconciliation. It's too bad it came too late to have him fix over his will. Mr. Hurley says he talked of it that very day. Mr. Hurley's his lawyer—I mean to say he's been attending to his affairs lately. I don't know anything about them. He'll be here himself. I telephoned him and told him that Bruce had put the case in your hands and that you were here."

"I go to bed to sleep," returned the servant doggedly. "It's not me place to be watchin' and listenin'."

Kayton shrugged his shoulders as if to conclude the inquiry.

"You're one of these very heavy sleepers, I suppose."

"No, sir," returned Topp. "I'm a very light sleeper, sir. You kin wake me with a whisper."

"How did it happen that you slept through a murder, then?" demanded Kayton quickly.

"I didn't say I slept through a murder," protested the footman.

"You say you didn't hear anything. What did you do?"

"I had an uneasy night," replied Topp reluctantly, with manifest uneasiness. "And at 8 in the mornin' I got hup and opened me window."

"Did you notice anything unusual?" demanded Kayton.

The footman hesitated. "I—I can't say it was unusual," he said uncertainly.

"You know, things were getting terrible. Why, the newspapers—they don't seem to care at all what they say. Do you know what I mean? Mary's prostrated. Why, they might as well accuse me of murder as Mary."

Kayton nodded, but his manner had changed. Having pumped her dry, he had no more time to waste on a garrulous woman.

"I'd like to see Miss Mazuret," he said politely, but with a certain abruptness that amounted to a command. It had the desired effect on Mrs. Wyatt, who was at the moment meditating new flights of oratory.

"Oh, well, I don't know," she stammered. "I mean to say—if you want to—I suppose you must. I'll go right to her now." And she swept out of the room, her respect for Mr. Kayton vastly diminished.

"Joe," said Kayton crisply, in a low voice. "You attend to getting the finger prints of the rest of the family when you're done there."

"Yes, governor," replied Manning without looking up from his work. A moment later Finley returned with the English footman Topp in tow. The latter looked even more distressed than Andy when he was dragged into the room of death. Andy was wounded in his superstitions—Topp in his sensibilities. He had never heard of murders in well regulated households. There was no precedent for it.

He stood at attention two paces into the room while Finley indicated him with the air of a museum curator showing off an ordinary specimen.

"This is Topp, sir," he said to Kayton. The detective glanced at the footman and the footman stared at the detective.

"I suppose this man had no experience when he came to work here," remarked Kayton, addressing the butler.

"On the contrary, sir," returned Finley, "he came with references from some of the best families."

"Why did they all discharge him?" demanded Kayton. Topp began to quake visibly, but his dignity was outraged.

"I don't, sir," began Finley, when Topp by a mighty effort propelled himself forward and interrupted.

"If you hallowed to me, sir," he said, addressing Kayton, "I kin say for myself that I've a record in service that any man might be proud of."

"How did you come to be mixed up in this murder?" demanded the detective, his dark eyebrows coming together and his eyes darting baleful glances at the servant. Topp gasped and grew whiter than his speckless collar.

"Selp me I'd no 'an in it!" he cried excitedly.

Kayton made an inarticulate sound, indicative of extreme unbelief.

"No?" commented the detective, with unconcealed interest. "What was it?" Topp drew himself up, remembering that before all else he was a servant. "It's not me place"—he began.

"What was it?" snapped Kayton, with an energy that made old Finley jump.

"What's the matter with ye, man?" demanded that worthy. "Out with it!" Topp moistened his lips. "I saw a light," he said in a low voice.

"Where?" The word cracked like a pistol shot.

Topp gulped and finally burst out in desperation.

"Well, sir," he cried, gazing accusingly at Finley, "since you will have it—it was in the room below."

"What room is that?" demanded Kayton, turning also to the butler.

"Why—why, sir," stammered the old man, aghast, "that's Miss Mary's room—but"

But Kayton listened to bear no more. "What did you do?" he asked Topp.

"I went back to me bed an' I was there when they wakened me."

Kayton thought for a moment in silence, his eyes on the floor. At last he raised them and nodded to the footman in sign of dismissal.

"Well, that's all for the present," Topp withdrew hurriedly, wiping the perspiration off his forehead, and Kayton asked Finley to get the maid, Kitty. The old butler slowly moved over to the bell and rang it and then swiftly faced about.

Dinner Stories

"Pat was hard at work digging a posthole when the boss strolled by."

"Well, Pat, said he, noting the progress of the work, "do you think you will be able to get all that dirt back into the hole again?"

Pat looked doubtfully at the pile of dirt and then at the hole, scratched the back of his head, and after some thought said:

"No, sor, sure I don't think I've dug the hole deep enough."

A new-made widow went to a life insurance office to receive the amount of a policy on her husband's life, which had, providentially, been made payable to her. The president thought it only proper to console with her on her bereavement. "I am truly sorry, madam, to hear of your loss."

"That's always the way with you men. You are always sorry when a poor woman gets a chance to make a little money."

Even doctors are not always literal in their prescriptions.

"You must take exercise," said the doctor to a patient. "The motor car in a case like yours gives the best exercise that."

"But I can't afford a car, on insurance pay," the patient growled.

"Don't buy one; just dodge 'em!" said the doctor.

Want Ads That Pay

It's well worth while to devote a few minutes' time to the writing of a classified advertisement. Too many of these small ads only half express the thought that is intended and the failure of the ad to bring results follows.

The line, "For Sale, A house in First Ward," may mean anything from a chicken house to a flat building and the very indefiniteness of the advertisement will tend to keep people from answering.

If you have a house for sale, give the full details, tell whether it is large or small, give the number of rooms, tell of its location, improvements, what condition it is in and the price and if it is desirable you may be sure of securing prospective buyers. And you will just as surely have eliminated a lot of answers that would have been worthless.
